Among 2,000 At Funeral Of N. Y. Times Publisher Were Kennedy Aide, Wide Cross Section Of Employes, Distinguished Leaders

Two thousand persons, including leaders in many fields, attended a funeral service for Orvil E. Dryfoos, president and publisher of The New York Times, at Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue at 65th Street, New York.

Mr. Dryfoos died of a heart ailment at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, at the age of 50. Those who gathered to pay final respects represented government and public affairs, journalism, business, philanthropy, and education, says the New York Times from which all the following is reprinted: Among them were Governor Rockefeller, Mayor Wagner, and Maj. Gen. Chester V. Clifton, military aid to President Kennedy.

Besides the family, there was a large delegation from every department of The Times. These ranged from the publisher's executive associates and leading editors through the rank and file of the newspaper's 5,200 employes.

The Rev. Dr. Nathan A. Perilman, rabbi of Congregation Emanu-El, officiated at the 30-minute service. At the request of the widow, the former Marian Effie Sulzberger, the eulogist was James Reston, the Washington correspondent of The Times.

Mr. Reston said that a newspaper is "a very special kind of partnership." He added that Mr. Dryfoos, like his predecessors, Adolph S. Ochs and Arthur Hays Sulzberger, "thought of himself . . . as one of a team working for an ideal larger than himself, of carrying on for a time something he devoutly believed to be important."

"Perhaps the simplest thing to say about him — and I believe I speak for my colleagues in this," Mr. Reston went on, "is that the more we knew him, the more we respected him. He was a gentleman. He was faithful to a noble tradition, to the family from which he came, and to the great family he joined and loved."

Mr. Dryfoos joined The Times in 1942 and became publisher on April 25, 1961, succeeding Mr. Sulzberger, his father-in-law. Mr. Sulzberger at that time became board chairman, a new position in the organization.

As the crowd gathered in the Temple, beginning shortly after 9 a.m., John Huston played the great organ above the chancel. The organist combined selections, including a Bach sonatina, "God's Time Is Best"; Henry Purcell's "When I Am Laid to Rest"; Bach's "Prelude in B-Flat Minor"; and an adagio by Joseph Gabriel Rheinberger.

The mahogany coffin, draped in a green blanket with red roses and white iris, trimmed with smilax, rested before the altar. In front of the coffin stood a white basket of tiny roses, red, white, and tea-colored. This was a final gift from the three Dryfoos children, Jacqueline Hays, 20; Robert Ochs, 18, and Susan Warms, 16.

Other flowers lay at the base of each of the two menorahs, or candelabra, and beneath the two pulpits. Over the marble-framed Ark between the menorahs the eternal light glowed dimly.

Present for the service were Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Mr. Dryfoos's father-in-law and chairman of the board of The New York Times, and Mrs. Sulzberger, and other members of the immediate families.

In the first row center were seated General Clifton, as personal representative of the President; Governor Rockefeller; Lieut. Gov. Malcolm Wilson; Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz, and Senator Jacob K. Javits.

Times personnel seated throughout the auditorium included, besides the Sulzbergers:

Amory H. Bradford, vice president and general manager; Harding F. Bancroft, secretary; Francis A. Cox, treasurer; Turner Catledge, managing editor; Lester Markel, Sunday editor; Charles Merz, editor emeritus; John B. Oakes, editor of the editorial page; and Arthur Krock, formerly the Washington correspondent, and now a Washington columnist for the paper.

Correspondents who served The Times at home and abroad, other senior executives, editors, and correspondents of The New York Times, and a wide cross-section of employes from all departments of the newspaper also attended the service.

Others were: Dr. John S. Dickey, president of Dartmouth College, of which Mr. Dryfoos, like Governor Rockefeller, was an alumnus and a trustee; Bernard S. Baruch, James A. Farley, and Jean Monnet, one of the chief architects of Europe's post-war economy.

After the psalms, the choir, under Cantor Arthur Wolfson, sang Handel's "In Thee, O Lord, Have I Trusted." The eulogy followed.

Rabbi Perilman, at the family's request, omitted a poem he had planned to read — it was a favorite of Abraham Lincoln, by William Knox — and said the concluding prayer:

"We know, O, heavenly Father, Thy way is sure. Whatever Thou doest is well done, is ever for the best, though we cannot always comprehend the mystery of Thy way . . .

"We thank Thee for the wonderful gifts of heart and mind and spirit with which Thou didst endow him; for the grace and warmth that he brought to every moment of his being. We thank thee that in a time that he was needed, he was to give his strength and his warmth without stint."

After the service, a group of about 35 persons, including the family, the Rabbi, Mr. and Mrs. Reston, and Edward Greenbaum, attorney and old friend of the Sulzbergers, drove to Temple Israel Cemetery, Mount Hope, Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.

There a brief commitment service was read by Rabbi Perilman. It concluded with the Kaddish, the prayer for the dead, and the words:

"May the Father of peace send peace to all who mourn, and comfort the bereaved among us. Amen."

Mr. Dryfoos was buried in a grave near the mausoleum in which Adolph S. Ochs, and his wife, who was Effie Wise, are buried. Mr. Ochs was publisher of The Times from 1896 until his death on April 8, 1935. He was succeeded by his son-in-law, Mr. Sulzberger. Six years later Mr. Dryfoos became the son-in-law of Mr. Sulzberger.

The plot is on a knoll looking west over the Saw Mill River. The weather was beautiful, the sky clear.

The Ochs mausoleum was open; the family had placed groupings of gladioluses and spring flowers just inside.

Tributes to Mr. Dryfoos continued to reach his family and The New York Times during the day. The senders included:

Minow, outgoing chairman of the Federal Communications Commission; René Mayer, former Premier of France; George Federer, consul general of West Germany; Zenon Rossides, Ambassador of Cyprus to the United States; Jaja Wachuku, Foreign Minister of Nigeria.

Lipsky Was Main Theoretician Of Zionism In U.S., Helped To Build Israel

Louis Lipsky, a pioneer and principal theoretician of the Zionist movement in the United States, died in his home, 302 West 86th Street, New York. He was 86 years old. The career of Mr. Lipsky, a tall, gaunt man with a white mane and boundless energy, says the New York Times, spanned the decade of the modern Zionist movement to the creation of Israel as an independent state.

Before the first Zionist Congress of 1897 was convened by Theodor Herzl in Basel, Switzerland, Mr. Lipsky was already active in Zionism in his native Rochester, N.Y., where he was editor of The Shofar, a weekly periodical.

However, it was not until Mr. Lipsky's arrival in New York in 1899 that he became a national figure. He founded the Maccabean magazine in 1901 as the first Zionist publication in English in the United States. It later developed into The New Palestine, also under his guidance, and to a large degree set the pattern of Zionist policy in the U.S. He was also editor of The American Hebrew from 1900 to 1914.

Mr. Lipsky served at various times as president of the Zionist Organization of America, chairman of the Palestine Foundation Fund, of the United Palestine Appeal, the American Zionist Conference, the American Zionist Council, and the Central Committee of the World Jewish Congress, and vice president of the American Jewish Congress.

Throughout his life, Mr. Lipsky strove to further the concept of democracy as a force that could be applied to the organization and functioning of Jewish life in America, says the N.Y. Times. Twice during World War II he made the risky trip from London to Palestine for conferences with Dr. Chaim Weizmann on the creation of a Jewish state.

Mr. Lipsky, the son of Polish immigrants, was one of eleven children. "When I was a boy," he once recalled, "a deep feeling for the need of a Jewish homeland came to me very forcibly. My parents always kept their doors open for people who arrived from their town and I was impressed."

He fought against the British Government over the partition of Palestine in the nineteen-forties, against Arab interests in the United Nations, and against divisive elements in American Jewry.

Mr. Lipsky was also a successful writer of books, short stories, essays, plays, book reviews, and drama criticism. He was president of the Eastern Life Insurance Company from 1930 to 1959.

Mr. Lipsky resigned from the American Zionist Council on November 14, 1950, because, he wrote, "it is impossible to cope with the confusions of functions and authority that prevail in the Zionist movement in the United States."

One month later, he withdrew his resignation on the ground that assurances of "strength and support" for Zionism had been received and he was therefore content. Mr. Lipsky submitted his final resignation in 1954, says the New York Times. Surviving are three sons, David, Eleazar and Joel; and nine grandchildren.

More than 1,500 persons attended a funeral service for Louis Lipsky, Zionist leader, at Congregation Bnai Jeshurun, 257 West 88th Street, in New York. Burial was in Mount Ararat Cemetery, at Farmingdale, L. I.

The Government of Israel was represented by Ambassador Avraham Harman, who read tributes from President Zalman Shazar and Premier David Ben-Gurion. Leaders of many Jewish organizations were in the synagogue. Former Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Representative Emanuel Celler were among the honorary pallbearers.

Bnai Brith Property, Bought From Red Cross, To Be Regional Home

Bnai Brith announced the purchase of a complex of three brick buildings in midtown Manhattan to consolidate in a single regional headquarters the New York area activities of its national programs.

The property, purchased from the American National Red Cross for $1,625,000, will also house the national staff and metropolitan New York office of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith and serve as headquarters for Bnai Brith District One, which administers the organization's local units in New York, New England, and eastern Canada.

The site, covering about 8,160 square feet on the corner of Lexington Avenue and 38th Street, includes a 12-story structure flanked by two adjoining buildings each of five stories. They were formerly Manhattan headquarters for the Red Cross. The 70,000 square feet of floor space will provide for greater administrative and housekeeping efficiency by bringing together Bnai Brith staffs that now operate from 10 separate locations scattered throughout Manhattan, Label A. Katz, president of Bnai Brith, said of the purchase, which anticipates a long-term savings on the $105,480 now being expended for the present rental of office space.

The three buildings are now being renovated, including the installation of central air conditioning, and will be ready for occupancy this summer. Cost of the renovation is estimated at more than $200,000.

When modernization of the thirty-year-old structures is completed, the main building will include a 300-capacity auditorium on the second floor that will honor the memory of Ben Goldman, former president of Eagle Clothes, Inc., and a long-time Bnai Brith leader in the New York area. The Chaplain Alexander D. Goode-Ben Goldman Lodge of Bnai Brith in Manhattan has pledged a large gift toward purchase of the new headquarters. A foundation established to memorialize Lawrence White, who had served for 30 years as executive secretary of Bnai Brith District One until his death in 1957, will also make a major contribution. A library in the main building will be named in his memory.

In addition to the Anti-Defamation League and District One staffs, the new headquarters will include the regional offices of Bnai Brith Youth Organization; Vocational Service and the Bnai Brith Foundation and National Youth Services Appeal, fund-raising units; the United Nations office of the Bnai Brith International Council; advertising offices of The National Jewish Monthly, its major publication; registration offices for Camp Bnai Brith in the Pocono Mountains; and headquarters for the New York Metropolitan Council of Bnai Brith.

International headquarters for the 470,000-member Jewish service organization is the $1,600,000 Bnai Brith Building in Washington, D.C., constructed in 1957. Completion of a Bnai Brith Building in Tel Aviv will also be completed this year. Its construction is being financed by funds received from the sale of a Berlin headquarters building that had been taken over by the Nazi regime in 1937.

President Shazar's message described Mr. Lipsky as "the symbol of pure-hearted dedicated and noble leadership in a sacred cause." Mr. Ben-Gurion's message described Mr. Lipsky as "that great Jew, pioneer of American Zionism, gifted writer and orator, and one of the most illustrious leaders of American and Diaspora Jewry."

"His spirit and soul," the tribute continued, "were an inseparable and harmonious combination of Judaism and Americanism.

"At every Jewish or Zionist gathering, Lipsky was a fountain of tradition and devotion to Jewry as if the Jewish people were his only homeland. And all his writings and speeches were imbued with the finest elements of American law, liberty, and the American spirit."

Moshe Sharett, former Israeli Prime Minister, now chairman of the executive committee of the Jewish Agency, delivered the eulogy. He called Mr. Lipsky "the venerable dean of American Zionism." He added: "Over decades he was its guiding spirit, its forceful spokesman, its redoubtable fighter."

Meyer W. Weisgal, chairman of the executive council of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel, who flew from Israel to attend the service, said in his tribute that Mr. Lipsky represented a perfect union between dedicated Americanism and dedicated Zionism.

"It was in the renaissance of the Jewish people that he saw the greatest drama of all, for which he abandoned his personal world as a creative writer," Mr. Weisgal said.

Honorary pallbearers included: Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization; Rabbi Max Nussbaum, president of the Zionist Organization of America; Joseph Meyerhoff, general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal; and Albert Schiff, president of the Jewish National Fund.

Also, Michael Comay, Ambassador of Israel to the United Nations; Abraham Feinberg, president, Bonds for Israel, Inc.; Dr. Louis Finkelstein, chancellor, of the Jewish Theological Seminary; Dr. Emanuel Neumann, chairman, American section, the Jewish Agency; and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver.

Rabbi Ira Eisenstein, of the Jewish Reconstructionist Foundation; and Rabbi Joachim Prinz of Temple Bnai Abraham, conducted the service. Cantor Moshe Nathanson, of the Society for the Advancement of Judaism, sang psalms and recited the prayer for the dead.

"Remarks On A Friend" is the title of Mr. Reston's eulogy:

"The death of Orvil Dryfoos was blamed on "heart failure" but that obviously could not have been the reason. Orv Dryfoos's heart never failed him or anybody else — ask the reporters on The Times. It was steady as the stars — ask anybody in this company of friends. It was faithful as the tides — ask his beloved wife and family. No matter what the doctors say, they cannot blame his heart.

"In the spiritual sense, his heart was not a failure, but his greatest success. He had room in it for every joy and everybody else's joy. This was the thing that set him apart — this warmness and purity of spirit, this considerateness, of his mother, whom he telephoned every day, of his wife and children, of his colleagues and competitors. And this uncorrupted heart, broken or no, is what is likely to be remembered of him in this great city and at Dartmouth, his other home.

"The obit-writers had a hard weekend with Orv because they kept hunting for him in the files and, of course, he wasn't there. He didn't make speeches, he made friends. The last time I saw him; he was breathing hard but still worrying about everybody else's worries and insisting that everybody get a good rest after the long strike.

"Most of the time, it is the heart that governs understanding, and understanding was his special quality. He not only understood human frailty but almost preferred it. He understood the sensitive pride and combative instincts of reporters and editors, which is not easy. He, even understood the anxieties of the printers during the time of our troubles.

"Throughout that whole ghastly period, when he wore his life away, he was again worrying about other people, this time about those who were on the street with no work, and those who were in the office with too much work. He was running the office by day and often negotiating far into the night. Even when his heart began to rebel and the doctors put him on digitalis to regulate it, nobody knew what was going on but his family. When the strike was over, he finally slipped away to the hospital and never came back.

"This quality of concern for others is vital to the tradition of The Times. A "newspaper is a very special kind of partnership. The main ingredients are not newsprint, ink, and advertising, but the more volatile human ingredients of blood, brains, pride and courage."

"This is why understanding is so important at the top, and why Adolph Ochs, Arthur Sulzberger, and Orvil Dryfoos, having understanding, were so good at it. For they saw a newspaper, as Edmund Burke saw a nation, not only as a partnership of the living, but as a partnership "between those who are living, those who are dead, and those who are to be born."

"There should be some consolation for us all, believer and unbeliever alike in this thought. Orvil Dryfoos had this special sense of trusteeship to a marked degree. He thought of himself, as his father-in-law did before him, as one of a team working for an ideal larger than himself, of carrying on for a time something he devoutly believed to be important. And he not only carried it higher up the hill, but expanded its influence across the continent and planted a new edition of The Times beyond the Rockies. Thus he achieved his ideal much more than most men are able to do, and remains a part of an institution that will go on as long as men are faithful to its ideals.

"I never thought much of the family joke that Arthur Sulzberger and Orvil Dryfoos "married The New York Times." The women they married were so much better than any newspaper. Besides, it was the women who married them, and what is important now, bore them the children who must carry on.

"Their fathers have given them a good lead. It is summed up for them — and I ask the children to remember it — in a quote from Robert Burns. He said: "Whatever mitigates the woes or increases the happiness of others — this is my criterion of goodness. And whatever injures society at large, or any individual in it — this is my measure of iniquity."

"Orvil Dryfoos lived by this noble ideal, but knew that ideals and traditions are not self-enforcing. Somebody must decide in the

U.S. LABOUR LEADER PRAISES ISRAEL FOR BUILDING ON HUMAN DIGNITY

Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile workers of America, AFL-CIO, paid tribute to the State of Israel for "building a new society fashioned in the image of social justice, of human dignity, of the worth of every human being." He spoke at a labor dinner in Detroit, Mich., at which $240,000 in Israel Bonds was sold in honor of Emil Mazey, secretary-treasurer of the UAW.

Mr. Reuther, who is one of the foremost labor leaders of the United States, emphasized the goals and aspirations of the State of Israel, which he last visited a year ago: "We are for Israel not because it is a new state, we are for Israel because it is a new kind of state, because it tries to do the things for which men have striven for centuries. What Israel and Emil Mazey believe and stand for are a good list of values. We pledge our continued support for Israel and Israel Bonds."

The largest purchase announced at the dinner was $100,000 in Israel Bonds by the United Automobile Workers, bringing their total purchases to $800,000.

Responding to the tributes which were paid him, Mr. Mazey cited Israel for demonstrating "that it it possible to have both bread and freedom. It has accomplished this," he said, "despite the fact that it is surrounded by hostile neighbors. We can learn a lesson from that country. I have advised our locals to invest in Israel. Israel Bonds are safe and show a good return and give us an opportunity to help to complete the job being done by a truly democratic country. Buying Israel Bonds is 'people-to-people democracy'."

Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh presented Mr. Mazey with Detroit's Distinguished Citizen Citation. Israel Consul Judith Beilin presented a plaque honoring him as a "labor pioneer, friend of Israel, and champion of human dignity."

FORMER GUARDS OF NAZI CAMPS JAILED FOR DEATHS THERE

After a trial lasting nearly five months, the Bonn, Germany, Assizes jailed six former guards of Kulmhof concentration camp, near Poznan, Poland, for complicity in the extermination of 150,000 Jewish men, women, and children during the Second World War, says the London Times. Six other defendants were acquitted because of lack of evidence.

Those sentenced were: Alois Haefele, aged 69, of Karlsruhe, 15 years' imprisonment and loss of civic rights for 10 years; Gustav Laabs, 60, of Kaldenkirchen, the same penalty; Walter Burmeister, 55, of Flensburg, 13 years' imprisonment and 10 years' loss of civic rights; Kurt Moebius, 67, of Aachen, eight years and six years; Karl Hatal, 51, of Duisburg, seven years and five years; and Ernst Burmeister, 53, of Frankfurt, three and a half years' imprisonment. Eighteen months spent under arrest pending trial will be deducted from sentences.

The President of the court, giving judgment, said that it had not been easy to reach a decision. Twenty years after the events the court had been faced at every turn with lack of evidence. It had been almost impossible to conjure up [illegible] because of the "devilish[illegible] of this party's dictatorship" of [illegible]. He especially thanked [illegible] who had appeared at the trial.

He also emphasized that the men accused had supported the Nazi death machine, and for that reason could not plead obedience to higher orders. They had been guilty, aware that the extermination was a crime. The defence plea that the statute of limitations applied to their case was [illegible]

PAPER TAKES IT BACK; RABBI SLONIM IS O.K. AGAIN

The Canadian Jewish News has printed a front-page apology for its comments on Rabbi Reuben Slonim, of Toronto, and his controversial series of Telegram articles on Israel.

Rabbi Slonim is dropping a libel suit against the newspaper, its publishers, J. Irving Oelbaum and Meyer W. Gasner, and the editor, M. J. Nurenberger, says the Telegram, of which Rabbi Slonim is Associate Editor.

The News apologized for referring to Rabbi Slonim as a "former rabbi"; for saying that his articles were a "marvelous gimmick from the circulation point of view"; and for saying he had written "a perversion of the truth."

newspaper business. In no other institution are so many choices offered every day of the year. In no other craft are there so many men with so many diverse ideas on so many subjects, about which so much can be said. But the tyranny of the deadline is always present, and while most of these decisions are made on the desk, the big ones have to be made at the top.

"Here Orvil Dryfoos was equal to his duty. I will always remember him in the city room on election night of 1960 when he was first to sense that we had gone out on a limb for Kennedy too early and insisted that we reconsider. And again in 1961 when we were on the point of reporting a premature invasion of Cuba his courteous questions and wise judgment held us back.

"He had his weaknesses, like all of us, but usually they sprang from the more amiable qualities of the human spirit. To hurt a colleague was an agony for him, and in this savage generation, when men decide, other men often get hurt. But he could make up his mind. He suffered, but he acted.

"Perhaps the simplest thing to say about him — and I believe I speak for my colleagues in this — is that the more we knew him, the more we respected him. He was a gentleman. He was faithful to a noble tradition, to the family from which he came, and to the great family he joined and loved.

"Martin Buber once said: "If we could hang all our sorrows on pegs, and were allowed to choose those we liked best, every one of us would take back his own, for all the rest would seem more difficult to bear."

"Let us then honor Orvil Dryfoos with remembrance rather than with tears. For his children will never be able to cry as much as he has made them laugh."

Born in New York on November 8, 1912, Mr. Dryfoos was the oldest son of Jack A. and Florence Levi Dryfoos. He attended Horace Mann School for Boys, where he was a member of the soccer, tennis and swimming teams and wrote a sports column for the school paper. He was graduated from Dartmouth, where he majored in sociology, in 1934.

His first job was with the brokerage firm of Asiel & Co. Three years later, he became a partner in Sydney Lewinson & Co. and bought a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. He was an active trader from that time until just before he joined the Times. He finally gave up his seat on the exchange in 1949.

Soon after his marriage, Mr. Sulzberger urged him to join The Times but he was hesitant at first because "I was enjoying my work downtown and doing fairly well, considering conditions then."

Much later, when asked to list the factors that determined his career, he wrote: "Marriage to the daughter of the publisher of The New York Times."

His start there was as a cub reporter in the city room where he once had an unbroken run of 17 night assignments. This left him with a lasting distaste for after-dinner speakers.

Once in a while he got a chance to be legman for one of the experienced reporters on a major story. A bright spot was his assignment to go along with The Times' reportorial teams to national conventions of the two major parties, beginning in 1944.

But he never did get a by-line.

After this breaking-in period, he was named assistant to Mr. Sulzberger and his upward progress in the organization began. He was elected vice-president and member of the board of directors in 1954, but continued as assistant to the publisher and became more and more Mr. Sulzberger's understudy. As vice-president, he was responsible for newsprint supply, circulation, mechanical and business matters.

It was notable that he remained Mr. Sulzberger's assistant even after he was elected president in 1957.

He became publisher in 1961.

Mr. Dryfoos knew how to delegate responsibility while keeping track of the intricate details of the vast Times operation. On the other hand, he was not the "driving" type of executive. He was affable and informal in his dealings with the staff, was on a first-name basis with a great many of its members.

On his first day as publisher, Mr. Dryfoos wrote in a personal statement on the editorial page: "I pledge that my associates and I will maintain vigilantly the high standards set by our predecessors."

Despite a heavy work schedule at the Times, he was active in a number of civic, educational and philanthropic programs. He was a trustee of Dartmouth College and a lay trustee of Fordham University. In addition, he was a trustee and member of the executive committee of the Rockefeller Foundation and a director of the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Hundred Year Association of New York, the Fifth Avenue Association and the New York World's Fair Corp.

He received a bronze plaque for "distinguished service" to the newspaper business when he retired this spring as a director of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

In World War II, he was vice-chairman of the New York Red Cross Chapter's blood donor committee, forerunner of the peacetime blood-donor program.

Mr. Dryfoos was also a trustee of the Baron de Hirsch Fund and a member of the Franco-American Society, the American Australian Association, the Pan-American Society of the United States, the Pilgrims, and Sigma Delta Chi.

He was president and director of the Interstate Broadcasting Co.; the New York Times Building Co.; and The New York Times of Canada, Ltd., a subsidiary of the parent paper. He was a director of the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co., Ltd., a Canadian producer of newsprint in which The Times has a 49 per cent interest.

Among additional posts which he held were those of president and director of The New York Times Foundation, a corporation organized for charitable purposes, and The New York Times Neediest Cases Fund, the paper's annual Christmas appeal in behalf of local charities.

During his short term as publisher, Mr. Dryfoos sought ways to make The Times more readable and more incisive without sacrificing the complete news report. He rarely missed the daily news conferences of editors and even when he could not attend he insisted on being informed each day of the stories chosen for the next day's front page.

His major responsibilities were on the business side of the paper, but he was jealous of its reputation for independence and reliability.

A major change during his regime was the establishment of a Western edition published in Los Angeles. "It will seek to supplement, not to supplant, the many fine newspapers in Western states," he said in announcing the new edition.

Mr. Dryfoos was a member of Congregation Emanu-El at Fifth Ave. and 65th St. His clubs included the Century Country of White Plains, and the Dutch Treat.

He played tennis, one of his favourite sports in school, for many years but gave that up later in favour of week end golf. He was an occasional trout fisherman and took part in family softball games from time to time.

Except in the worst weather, he made it a practice to walk from his home at 1010 Fifth Ave. (82d St.) to his office on W. 43d St. He maintained a residence also in Stamford, Conn.

The following tributes are from a competitor, The New York Herald Tribune:

No one knows a man quite as well as his competitor, and in the two years since he assumed full control of the New York Times, we at the Herald Tribune came to know — and admire — Orvil Dryfoos.

He was an asset to his newspaper. He presided over its recent expansion to the West Coast and he helped to maintain its finest qualities.

But more than that, he was an asset to the entire newspaper community in this city and in the nation as a man of good will, good taste and constant interest in the value and function of news. For that, and for the warm human qualities that made him a friend, we shall miss him.

JOHN HAY WHITNEY
Editor in Chief and Publisher of the New York Herald Tribune

Orvil Dryfoos and I became warm friends under one of the most difficult situations our newspapers, or the newspapers of this city, have ever faced: The long, drawn-out strike that ended only two months ago.

In that time, when public and private demands were at odds, when the need was for understanding and breadth of outlook, he showed himself to all involved as a man of deep personal integrity and complete selflessness. His concern embraced the whole of the newspaper industry in the city and the nation and he gave of himself unstintingly to solve its problems.

To all those who dealt with him he was generous, intelligent and fine. His sudden passing is a sharp personal loss. It is a loss too, to New York and to the nation of which he was a leading citizen.
